The Black Death in the Middle Ages killed millions. The symptoms were painful, unpleasant swelling under the skin. Some people bled black out of the neck, wrists and groin. Also the sufferer may develop a high fever and would probably die in the next forty-eight hours or so. Medieval medicine or charms etc normally did not work. Some priests led prayers or processions as they believed that the plague was caused by god as a way of punishing them. They believed that by punishing them the plague might ignore them completely. The use of however, some practical methods were here scented vinegar which having acid medical cases were weaker than the one did have some effect as it contained powerful antiseptic.

The Black Death was probably a mixture of the bubonic plague and bacterial infection - that's what the scientists say anyway. This however in the Middle Ages was a completely different case. Some people thought the plague was a natural disaster. Fear of death was almost everywhere including the more powerful ones i.e. kings and queens. Other people thought the plague was a punishment from god as you plenty of money to build cathedrals, crosses and new church buildings.

The plague arrived in Europe in 1347 and spread westwards. It was caused when a flea bit an infected rat, it sucked its blood which was infected and then bit a human. Therefore transferring the infected blood onto the human causing the Black Death. The origin of the plague started in Asia and spread westwards of Europe. No one knew the exact amount of people that had died because of the Black Death. Many people have estimated around one third of the population died if not half. Deaths were concentrated in compact areas such as churches. Courtyards were affected less.

VI. SIR ROGER AT HOME.

No. 106.]

MONDAY, JULY 2, 1711.

[Addison.

*Hinc tibi copia
Manabit ad plenum, benigno
Ruris honorum opulenta cornu.*

HORACE, Odes, I. xvii. 14.

HAVING often received an invitation from my friend Sir Roger de Coverley to pass away a month with him in the country, I last week accompanied him thither, and am settled with him for some time at his country house, 5 where I intend to form several of my ensuing speculations. Sir Roger, who is very well acquainted with my humour, lets me rise and go to bed when I please, dine at his own table or in my chamber as I think fit, sit still and say nothing without bidding me be merry. When 10 the gentlemen of the country come to see him, he only shows me at a distance. As I have been walking in his fields I have observed them stealing a sight of me over an hedge, and have heard the Knight desiring them not to let me see them, for that I hated to be stared at.

15 I am the more at ease in Sir Roger's family, because it consists of sober and staid persons; for, as the Knight is the best master in the world, he seldom changes his servants; and as he is beloved by all about him, his servants never care for leaving him; by this means his 20 domestics are all in years, and grown old with their master. You would take his valet de chambre for his brother, his butler is gray-headed, his groom is one of the gravest men that I have ever seen, and his coachman has the looks of a privy counsellor.
