Should the voting age be lowered to 13?

I believe that sixteen-year-olds should be granted the right to vote. I also believe it is important to ensure that sixteen-year-olds are given the same level of education as those aged 17 and over. The UK voting age is currently 18, which is a high age and sixteen-year-olds are often the most vulnerable in society. I believe this needs to be changed.

In the UK, sixteen-year-olds are permitted to be employed, work full-time, pay taxes, have bank accounts, get married and join the armed forces. If all sixteen-year-olds were given the same level of education as those aged 17 and over, they would be more responsible enough to vote. This is because without representation, one of the main things the government does is to raise taxes. The Labour Government said that cutting the voting age would be a good idea. Since 1998, the following eight countries or provinces have lowered their voting age: Iceland, South Africa, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Latvia and Estonia. Other countries with the lower voting age include Israel, Cuba, Philippines (for students) and Rwanda (for employees). In 1971, the Philippines started to give the right to vote to all citizens aged 16 and over. If responsible enough to be employed or married, they should have the right to vote and have a say in how their lives are spent. According to a survey carried out, 67% of sixteen-year-olds have a mobile phone and 70,000 people have voted at the age of 16. 50% of sixteen-year-olds are 40% of all 16-year-olds that sixteen-year-olds are responsible enough to vote. In my opinion, most of the age are responsible enough to vote and they can't get drunk. Only the responsible ones are going to bother voting so the decision they make will be for the good.

I believe lowering the voting age would have a very positive impact on young adults as well as their families and the rest of the world. Teenagers will learn and be educated about politics at a younger age. A good source is "The Voting Age". This is a situation where sixteen-year-olds are given the right to vote, such as the one that is already. Despite these, it has probably increased the interest of voting in sixteen-year-olds as more parents discuss politics with their kids and encourage them to vote because of this. It would also be a good idea that sixteen-year-olds should be given the right to vote, which also helps them to make more informed decisions. It is to give them the opportunity to make their own decisions and have their own say in how their lives are spent. This is a very important step for the public to become more responsible.

Sixteen-year-olds may say they aren't the vote but are they just saying for the sake of argument or are they truly interested in politics? The vote is not just for the sake of the vote but for the sake of the country. Are they interested? The UK Youth Parliament would have over 100,000 members between 2002 and 2005. In 2005, 100,000 young people took a vote in the elections, with 1,200 standing as candidates from across England, Wales, and Northern Ireland. The Children and Young People's Assembly for Wales currently has a total membership of 100 young people. According to a survey I carried out, more than 60% of the sixteen-year-olds I surveyed thought that sixteen-year-olds should be allowed to vote. 40% of sixteen-year-olds thought that sixteen-year-olds should not be allowed to vote. 40% of sixteen-year-olds thought that sixteen-year-olds should be allowed to vote. 40% of sixteen-year-olds thought that sixteen-year-olds should not be allowed to vote. The majority of sixteen-year-olds are interested in politics but are they just saying for the sake of the vote?
