Personal Qualities and Value of Friendship
By Linda Larson (1981)

Development of human capabilities starts from one's childhood. Parents, teachers, religious leaders and others have a lasting impression on one's life throughout the years of growth. I find myself to be fortunate enough to have been blessed with parents who are loving and caring, teachers who are understanding and helpful, and religious leaders who have nourished my life with their wisdom.

A personal quality that I want to develop is confidence. With this trait, I hope to succeed in the future. Confidence allows one to "reach out" and have one's own ideas and opinions and reach the goals of success. Without confidence, no one can succeed. Confidence is building in yourself. You have to remove doubts and yourself before you can be wise. A person's self-worth is only recognized when he achieves self-confidence. With confidence, you have achieved all your goals.

"It is not hard to be confident if you are not dependent on the love of others. With confidence, you have not been before you have been."

WISDOM

Having confidence, while being with confidence and having the, has the courage and confidence to stand up against the selfish interests and interests of the world.

My friends tell me that I am confident and friendly. I believe that success is a matter of my relationships. Instead of feelings and emotions, respect for themselves and others, and respect for justice will give you many friends in your life.

Being friendly doesn't only mean that you make friends easily but it shows your respect for others. You are respectful to the respect you give to others. In turn, you will receive respect for yourself.

You must be honest, careful, respectful, and willing to help. Before trying to make friends, you should be one.

The reason I would like to share with someone that I may call a friend will be honesty, honesty, honesty, honesty, and loyalty. I would like to see my friends from someone fairly, and help anyone who needs it. Being friendly will allow me to see anyone's human nature objectively.

"It is not to know by the company he keeps."

A friend should have about your feelings and should always be there for you. My friend says, "A friend is not a friend today." My friends are always available whenever you need them.

Some friends make promises of their friendship with others, they "not" others, or like that the friend, friendship with these people and their friends is to have or better ways.

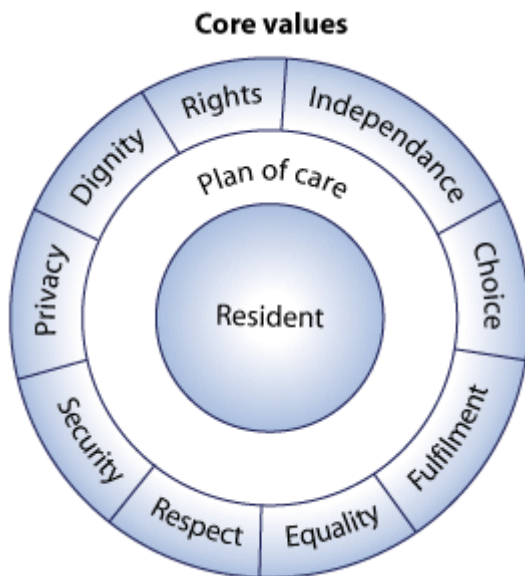

The most important quality I want to be a friend to people, loyalty to the truth, honesty to a friend, a person who is loyal to the truth, honesty, honesty, honesty, and respect. The loyalty of a person to the truth is the most important quality of a friend. A loyal friend is always there when you need her and before you in every way she can.
